FIREMEN WANT NEW APPARATUS

Automobile Fire Engine Believed by Many to be Necessary for Proper Protection of Property. To Call Town Meeting.

Early action looking toward the purchase of additional fire fighting equipment—possibly an automobile fire engine—was planned at a meeting of the local company on Wednesday evening. A town meeting is to be called in the very near future to discuss the question and it is expected that a committee, appointed by the firemen, will receive active co-operation on the part of the citizens and the town council.

"General Meade" has been in service for many years and fears have been entertained for a long time that the old engine might go wrong at some critical moment leaving the town practically helpless before a fire of any consequence. Various suggestions have been made from time to time about some method of relieving this situation, the purchase of a chemical engine being one of these plans.

But the fire company feels that something more efficient and more powerful must be purchased. Gettysburg has been growing steadily. With an increase in population has come a steady extension of the built-up portion of the town and a much wider territory must be protected now than when the present Sisy engine was purchased. With this extension has come the problem of getting the apparatus quickly to the scene of action and, with the present method of conveying engine, truck and reels, properties near the borough limits could be hopelessly in flames before a drop of water from the hose could be gotten there.

The purchase of an automobile fire engine—say members of the company—would do away with the delay in getting pressure, once the engine has arrived, for this modern apparatus is ready for immediate use. All these facts and many others will be brought out at the town meeting in the near future to be called by the committee appointed Wednesday evening, G. A. McClellan, C. H. Wilson, Dr. Henry Stewart, William Fleming and F. B. Slonaker.

The action of the town council in authorizing the purchase of 500 feet of hose and six plugs was reported as were contributions of $15.00 from James Caldwell and $5.00 from Mrs. Isaac Johns following work at the fire in the rear of Chambersburg street. The company gave a rising vote of thanks for the donations.

Oran Riggs and Edward Pfaff were elected members of the company and Charles H. Wilson was chosen to represent Gettysburg at the state convention at Lebanon in September.

The fire company and the Citizens Band will turn out in a parade on Friday evening and all members are requested to meet at the engine house promptly at 6.45. The parade will move promptly at seven o'clock.

The food sale committee reports that very generous donations have been received. The Citizens' Band will furnish music both evenings of the sale, Friday and Saturday.

FRATERNITY DANCE

The concluding social event of commencement week at college was the Phi Gamma Delta fraternity dance on Wednesday evening. The college orchestra played, and Matthews catered. Pretty leather fraternity streamers were given as favors. Among the guests were Mrs. Peck, Hollidayburg; Mrs. F. M. M. PRETTY WEDDING IN ST. JAMES

Miss Flo Blocher Becomes Bride of Rev. Joseph Arnold. Both will Go as Missionaries to Africa. Pretty Wedding.

A wedding of exceptional beauty was solemnized in St. James Chapel at noon today when Miss S. Flo Blocher, of Seminary Ridge, became the bride of the Rev. Joseph Arnold, of Brooklyn, New York. A color scheme of gold and white carried out in gowns, decorations and flowers made an unusually pretty scene. Preceding the wedding Mrs. Joseph B. Baker played "Album Leaf" and Miss Ruth Clutz sang "Shall I Wed Thee." Mrs. Baker played the Bridal Chorus from Lohengrin as the processional.

The ushers J. Calvin Hartman, Maurice Bender, and George E. Hartman, of Gettysburg; and Harry Kuhlman, of Ursina, preceded the wedding party. Miss Mary Himes and Miss Belle Bream, the bridesmaids, carried white daisies tied with yellow ribbons. They wore white with wreaths of daisies in their hair. Justine Hartley and Lucille Bender, the flower girls, carried baskets of daisies followed. They wore white with yellow hair ribbons.

Miss Wanda Arnold, of Brooklyn, the maid of honor wore white embroidery over yellow silk, carried yellow daisies and preceded the bride on the arm of her brother Ralph Blocher. She wore white chiffon over satin and carried roses. Rev. Mr. Arnold was attended by Rev. Robert E. Peterman, of Hanover, the best man.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Joseph B. Baker, the double ring service being used. Ralph Blocher gave the bride away. Mrs. Baker played the Mendelssohn March as the recessional and the two flower girls preceded the wedding party strewing daisies in their path.

The wedding was attended by a large number of friends. The church was beautifully decorated with festoons of daisies and the pillars were draped with leaves. Following the wedding a reception was held at the home of the bride on Seminary Ridge to which her most intimate friends and relatives were invited.

Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Arnold left at 3.42 over the Western Maryland for Pize Beach, New Jersey, where they will spend ten days. On July 4th they sail on the steamship "Cincinnati," of the Hamburg American Line, and will spend several weeks in Germany and Switzerland, going from there to Monrovia, Liberia, Africa, where they will take up work in the Lutheran Mission.

The bride is a daughter of Mrs. J. O. Blocher, a graduate of the Gettysburg High School and a young woman having a large circle of friends in town. Rev. Mr. Arnold is a graduate of both college and seminary. During his stay here he has been actively engaged in many church and other religious activities.

Among the out of town guests at the wedding were, Hans Arnold, of Brooklyn, N. Y.; Mrs. W. B. Clancy and son, Miss Lindemeyer, of Pittsburgh; Miss Shryock, Chambersburg.

SMUT APPEARS

Dr. H. A. Surface, the State Zoologist, says that the "black head" reported in wheat fields by farmers in York and other southern counties, and in the southwest part of the state, was nothing else than the wheat smut, or black smut, which has occurred periodically for many years. It is similar to the oats smut and causes considerable loss.

Dr. Surface says that the best thing to do is to cut it out, but that preventive measures should be taken before the wheat is sown. The best preventive, he says, is to soak the wheat in a solution of formalin. A state bulletin was published on the way to prevent the smut last fall.

The recurrence of the smut this year, says Dr. Surface, is due to the prevalence of cold and wet weather, such as has been experienced in several parts of the state.

FIRELET

Burning brush this morning set fire to the old Dobbin house on Steinwehr avenue, the roof catching from the sparks. A hurry call was sent for the fire company and they responded quickly but their services were not required, several well directed buckets of water doing all the work necessary.

THOSE TAKEN BY HAND OF DEATH

David March, for Many Years an Adams County Resident, Dies while Driving Near McSherrystown Typhoid Takes Clarence Carbaugh

DIED IN BUGGY

Daniel March, of Midway, died suddenly at 1.30 p. m. Tuesday, from neuralgia of the heart, aged 64 years, 1 month and 27 days.

Mr. March had gone in the morning to the home of his son, Linus, near Bart's church, where he assisted in picking cherries. After dinner he remarked that he did not feel well and thought he had better go home. Mrs. March asked him to wait a short while and she would accompany him. He said he would drive on slowly and she could catch up. When about two miles from the house, he was seized with the affection of the heart, and was found lying unconscious in the buggy by Mrs. March. He was breathing slightly when she reached his side, but he died soon after without regaining consciousness.

He was taken to his home by John Brown, a neighbor. An inquest was held by Drs. George L. Rice and A. C. Rice, of McSherrystown, who pronounced death due to aortic aneurysm of the heart, he having suffered from heart trouble for several years.

He was born in this county, near East Berlin, April 17, 1848, and was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel March. His early life was spent on the farm, and later he followed the occupation of farming.

Mr. March was a veteran of the Civil War, having served in Co. H 5th Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry and was transferred on account of disability, December 18, 1863, to Co. 129, Second Battalion Veteran Reserve Corps. From this he was discharged on a surgeon's certificate of disability, December 6, 1864.

Mr. March was a member of Major Jenkins Post No. 99, G. A. R. of Hanover.

He was married to Miss Louisa Weisensale, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Casper Weisensale, of this county, about 45 years ago. He spent the greater part of his life in this county, moving to Midway about seven years ago.

Besides his widow he is survived by nine children, as follows: Linus C. March, near Bart's church; Ida S. Miller, at home; Charles E. March, Bonneauville; Mrs. Kate E. Bender, Mt. Rock; William H. March, Wayne; Rev. Daniel J. March, Springetts, York county; Elmer C. March, Midway; Mrs. Laura A. Brady, Irishstown; and Clarence J. March, at home.

Funeral services, June 15, services at the house at 9 o'clock, further services and interment at Bart's United Brethren church, of which he was a life-long member. Rev. S. A. Crabill officiating.

CLARENCE CARBAUGH

Clarence Carbaugh, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Carbaugh, died at his home in Highland township at eight o'clock this morning after an illness of several weeks from typhoid fever, aged 16 years, 7 months and 28 days.

He leaves his parents, four brothers and two sisters, Harry, Roy, Charles Howard, Mary and Myrtle Carbaugh, all at home.

Funeral services at the house on Friday afternoon at one o'clock. Interment at Flob's church.

CHARGED WITH FORGERY

Harry K Myers, of York County, was arrested here charged with forging the name of Adam S. Hamm, of Codorus township, on a $170 promissory note dated December 2, 1911. A charge of carrying concealed deadly weapons was preferred by Constable Squire Hill. Myers was taken before Squire Hill and was turned over to a York County officer who took him back to that county. After the forgery case is disposed of there he will be available to answer the concealed weapons charge.

40 MORE VOTES AWARDED TAFT

National Committee Decides Contests From Five States.

BEHIND IN ITS WORK

Hottest Fights Were Over the California and Michigan Contests and Debate Was Bitter.

Chicago, June 13.—President Taft gained forty more votes in the Republican national convention through the settlement of contest cases by the national committee.

It was a day of Taft victories exclusively. In the case of the California, Arizona and Michigan contests the Roosevelt forces made a fight and voted their fullest strength against the Taft delegates. In the California case they secured a roll call, losing 16 to 37; in the Arizona contest they failed to get a roll call, and in the Michigan cases none was asked, although they voted against seating the Taft delegates-at-large.

The contests settled in favor of President Taft were: Arizona delegates-at-large, 6; California, Fourth district, 2; Louisiana, delegates-at-large, 6; First, Second, Third, Fourth, Fifth, Sixth, Seventh districts, 14; Michigan, delegates-at-large, 6; Mississippi, delegates-at-large, 4; First district, 2. Total, 40.

The national committee has thus far awarded 140 contested delegates to President Taft and one to Colonel Roosevelt.

Pearl Wight, national committee man from Louisiana and the Roosevelt leader there, lost in his fight to seat the Roosevelt delegates from that state. An effort was made by Committee man Harry S. New to end the long standing differences among the Louisiana Republicans by officially recognizing the Leisel faction, now controlling the state Republican organization, but Mr. Wight headed off such action.

Governor Chase S. Osborn, of Michigan, and his Roosevelt delegates-at-large were unseated by the decision of the Michigan case for Taft. The contest over the Fourth California district, decided for President Taft, furnished the most bitter exchanges of the day, Francis J. Heney, leading the Roosevelt forces and insisting upon recognition for the Roosevelt delegates there.

A running fire was opened on the committee by Francis J. Heney and a stinging statement was received from Governor Hiram W. Johnson in the interests of Roosevelt.

Mr. Heney, seated in the national committee with a proxy, assailed the members of the committee, emphasizing particularly Senator Murray Crane, of Massachusetts, whom he addressed as a man who had "no respectability to lose." While Chairman Roosevelt was admonishing the San Franciscan to address the committee properly Governor Johnson arrived at the Coliseum. He declined to appear before the committee and issued a written statement, which Mr. Heney later read to the committee. In this Governor Johnson declared he declined to submit "to a trial to the title of property by the thief who steals it."

During the roll call a bitter attack on Mr. Heney was made by Committeeman Shackelford, of Alaska, who voted for the Taft delegates. He declared that Alaska had been "robbed" by the "Noyes machine of Minnesota" and that Francis J. Heney was its chief counsel.

The national committee had before it when it adjourned 112 contested seats still to pass upon. Chairman Victor Rosewater, in a statement at the end of the session, said the committee was not keeping pace with the work of the last convention. In 1908 eighty-eight contests remained to be decided on the Wednesday night preceding the convention. Members of the committee fear that the contests will run well over into the opening day of the national convention.

The remainder of the Mississippi contests and those from the states of Missouri, North Carolina, Oklahoma, South Carolina and Tennessee will, it is believed, be disposed of next.

ROOT CONFERS WITH TAFT

Discusses His Proposed "Keynote" Speech as Temporary Chairman. Washington, June 13.—Senator Elihu Root, of New York, the Taft choice for both temporary and permanent chairman of the Republican national convention, had a final conference with the president at the White House.

Some of the details of the speech Senator Root expects to deliver and some of the plans of the platform are said to have been discussed.

Here's a Higher Court Puzzle. Buffalo, N. Y., June 13.—A problem that is puzzling the federal authorities here is how to destroy the contents of 18,000 bottles of tomato cat sup without breaking the bottles. The number of bottles was seized recently and ordered destroyed by Judge Hazel in the United States district court. The order said nothing about destroying the bottles.

Suicide on Mother's Grave. Chicago, June 13.—Otto Tosetti, president of the Tosetti Brewing company, committed suicide on his mother's grave in Oakwood cemetery.

TALK OF FORMING A THIRD PARTY

California Delegation Denounce National Committee.

Los Angeles, Cal., June 13.—When the California delegation to the Republican national convention at Chicago arrived here aboard a special train and learned that two of the delegates had been deposed by the Republican national committee in favor of Taft contestants, resolutions were adopted condemning the national committee and talk of creation of a third party was freely indulged in.

Newspapers supporting the "progressive" wing of the Republican party greeted the delegation with editorials urging them to support a third party movement, if Roosevelt should not be nominated, and the resolutions pledged the delegates "to go the limit" against "those who are putting through the anti-Roosevelt program at Chicago."

A mass meeting to protest against the "outrageous tactics" of the national committee was held at the railroad station here.

TO AID VOLCANO VICTIMS

Reports Indicate That 200 Lives Were Lost in Alaska.

Washington, June 13.—President Taft in a special message to congress asked for an appropriation of $100,000 to be expended by the revenue cutter service in caring for volcano victims near Kodiak, Alaska.

Property and Lives Destroyed.

Seward, Alaska, June 13.—Details of the havoc wrought along the Alaska peninsula and on Kodiak, Adognak and Raspberry Islands by the eruption of Mount Katmai slowly are coming in at Seward, the nearest cable station.

Reports said the greatest damage was done, probably with loss of life, among the fishing villages on the coast of the peninsula, virtually at the foot of the volcano.

No definite news has been received from these settlements, which have a population of about 200, mostly natives, but reports from Uyak, a cannery town on the opposite side of Shelikof strait, said it was improbable that those on the mainland escaped.

SAYS CHUM SET HIM AFIRE

Poured Coal Oil on Him and Then Threw Lighted Match.

Salisbury, Md., June 13.—Charles Hastings, the ten-year-old son of William Hastings, lies in the hospital here critically burned as the result of a prank by his companion, a boy fifteen years old, named Niblett.

Young Hastings regained consciousness to tell his story, which was as follows:

"Niblett asked me to go boat riding with him, and when I got in the boat he poured coal oil all over me and gave me a match and told me to burn it off my clothes. I wouldn't do it, so he struck a match and threw it on me, and the flames shot up over my head. Some man jumped into the boat and threw me into the river. That's all I know until I got here."

Physicians say he is mortally burned and can live but a short time.

Young Niblett is missing from town and is being sought by the police.

Deadlock May Emerge on Reciprocity.

Washington, June 13.—A deadlock between both houses of congress over the senate's proposal to repeal the Canadian reciprocity law was foreshadowed when the senate by a vote of 35 to 27 refused to recede from its amendment to the iron and steel tariff revision bills, embodying the repeal provision.

FLINN THREATENS BOLT BY ELECTORS

Declares Pennsylvania Will Vote Against Taft.

PLANS TO SAVE PARTY

Leader Says Men Elected in Pennsylvania and Other States Will Vote For Roosevelt in Electoral College.

Chicago, June 13.—Recourse to Roosevelt men who have been selected as presidential electors in different states is the announced plan of William Flinn, of Pittsburgh, should the convention nominate President Taft.

The Roosevelt leader made this statement in a vigorous attack on the national committee. He declared that such a movement, while it might defeat the Republican nominee for president, would save the party in the big Republican states.

His position was endorsed by Governor Glasscock, of West Virginia, who declared that all the West Virginia Republican electors are for Roosevelt and would vote for him in the electoral college, regardless of any nomination made by the convention.

Senator Joseph M. Dixon listened to Mr. Flinn and Governor Glasscock and said:

"I don't think there will be any need for such action. You hear what they say. In my opinion Colonel Roosevelt will surely be nominated. The Taft forces will not dare to steal the nomination."

Mr. Flinn and Governor Glasscock declared that the state conventions in Pennsylvania and West Virginia had not been adjourned and would be reconvened, if necessary, and the electors given positive instructions to vote for Colonel Roosevelt, if circumstances warranted.

"We are not going to allow the national committee to destroy the Republican party in Pennsylvania," said Mr. Flinn. "We don't intend to stand idly by and lose ten or fifteen congressmen and the legislature."

"We propose to protect ourselves at home. Thirty of the thirty-eight presidential electors are for Roosevelt, and if they are elected and the nomination is stolen and given to President Taft, those thirty will vote in the electoral college for Colonel Roosevelt."

"We don't propose to allow delegates from the southern states and the insular possessions to dilute a presidential nomination to the great Republican states. The time has come when political rebellion is necessary for self-protection of the Republican states."

Under this plan no bolt will be necessary. It would result, perhaps, in losing a Republican president, but would win locally. No other civilized country would tolerate such practices as are being had in the national committee.

"I have talked with Roosevelt men in Pennsylvania, and they agree with me that it is necessary if Taft is nominated to carry the fight to the electoral college."

"In our state the entire list of presidential electors is for Colonel Roosevelt and will vote for him," said Governor Glasscock. "There is no law to prevent it. The people vote for electors and not for president. If the nomination is stolen for President Taft you can say that West Virginia's electoral vote will be cast for Theodore Roosevelt. I agree with Mr. Flinn and we will follow the same course."

Senator Penrose, of Pennsylvania, declined to comment on the statement of Mr. Flinn relative to the Pennsylvania presidential electors voting for Colonel Roosevelt regardless of the action of the convention.

Positive information as to whether Colonel Roosevelt will come to Chicago to look after his own interests before the work of deciding the contested delegations is finished by the Republican national committee is sought by both his own workers and those favoring President Taft.

The success of the Roosevelt workers in gaining one contested seat gave rise to a report that the former president would come, while many of his own workers asserted they had assurance that he would not be in Chicago. Other Roosevelt workers declared they were certain that Mr. Roosevelt would be in Chicago by Friday night.

On that night a mass meeting will be held by the Roosevelt followers, and many maintained that the candidate would be the principal orator. At this meeting strong protests are promised against the action of the national committee in seating some of the Taft delegates in the contests.

High Speed Caused Fliers' Deaths.

Washington, June 13.—The army board of inquiry which investigated the deaths of Lieutenant Leighton W. Hazlehurst and Arthur L. Welsh, the Wright pilot, in the fall of an army aeroplane near here, has reported that the accident was caused by Welsh's unusual speed at a sharp turn, which caused the plane's aluminum wings to collapse under the terrific air pressure.

Four Tramps Burn to Death.

Mackinaw City, Mich., June 13.—Four tramps were burned to death here in a fire that destroyed a small fish shed in which they were sleeping.

PASSING OF THE CHAPERON

Her Number Is Being Reduced to an Extent That Threatens Complete Extermination.

That the chaperon will soon be extinct is probable. No longer does she sit back forgotten, beaming benevolently upon the young people assembled in her charge; nor is she yet a severe, silent, stout personage, dampening the ardor of aspiring lovers, reducing laughter and undue hilarity to a minimum with her overawing presence.

But the question remains whether we are altogether wise in reducing her numbers to such an extent that she is in immediate danger of complete extermination.

Girls in their first twenties—and even in their teens—run about with boys and young men at their own sweet will, treating them with a hale and hearty comradeship, which certainly makes for the gayety of life, but which, by eliminating sentiment, acts as a deterrent to marriage. And it is not only the young men of the year 1912 who are reluctant to bind themselves definitely, but their bolterous, healthy, humorous feminine contemporaries seem equally shy of "tying themselves up," as they would phrase it.

It was the pleasing duty of the chaperon, by carefully guarding her pretty charges, to fan the flame of love, and by putting every obstacle in the way of the young suitor "to bring him," as old-fashioned mothers tersely put it, "to the point."

UNIQUE PIECE OF HEADWEAR

Striking Example of the Milliner's Art Seen on the Boulevards of Paris.

One of the striking pieces of headwear of the Paris boulevards is an all-silk, close-fitting bonnet, which comes down well over one side of the face and sets jauntily. A bow effect in the back gives it a chic appearance. The colors range in hue from deep red to light pink.

SMART WRAPS FOR SUMMER

Discarded Shawls or Scarfs Will Be Found Most Useful for Hot Weather Wear.

The woman is extremely lucky at present who can rummage through an old trunk and resurrect a big shawl or scarf; for the most fascinating evening wraps can be concocted from a discarded article of this description. The gayer the coloring this season, the better and if your shawl has fringe it adds to its value.

Lay the straight length of the shawl or scarf (which should be at least 3 1/4 yards in length and at least three-quarters of a yard in width) across the shoulders with the middle fold at the back of the neck. In this take up a huge tuck or "v" to make the wrap fit over the shoulders. Let this big tuck hang down in the back and finish the point with a big long tassel of silk of a corresponding hue. The ends are brought to the front and left to hang over the bust. Then hold your arm out straight, and allow the rest of the wrap to hang over it evenly back and front so you can judge just how much of the edge to turn back for a cuff, catching it together on the underside of the wrist. A lace collar and cuffs may be added, but they are easily dispensed with if not available. The scarf utilized in the one the writer saw was made from a long liberty scarf of deep rose color and was really exquisite.

Our Citizen's Demand

Fully Complied with.—A Gettysburg Resident Furnished It.

There are few items which appear in this paper more important to Gettysburg people than the statement published below. In the first place, it is from a citizen of Gettysburg, and can be thoroughly relied upon. In the second place, it indisputably proves that Doan's Kidney Pills do their work thoroughly and not temporarily. Read this carefully:

Mrs. N. L. Wiernan, 135 York St., Gettysburg, Pa., says: "I suffered a great deal from backache and I often had nervous spells. When Doan's Kidney Pills were brought to my attention, I procured a supply at the People's Drug Store and commenced their use. The backache was relieved and my entire system was benefited. BASEBALL RECORDS WORTH A THOUGHT

Here are some of the baseball records made in the old days which the veterans delight to talk about:

In the thirteen years between 1877 and 1900 "Silver" Flint caught 835 games, and in 833 of them he wore neither mask, glove nor chest protector.

In the sixteen seasons between 1876 and 1892, Adrian C. Anson played in 1,582 games and made 2,252 hits. His batting average for the entire sixteen years was .344.

In 1875 Boston won every game played on the home grounds.

In 1,555 games, covering twelve consecutive seasons, Mike Kelley had a batting average of .321.

Hugh Duffy, with the Boston club in 1894, had the unprecedented batting average of .438.

The first no-hit game ever pitched was by Joseph Mann of Princeton, N. J., against Yale, New Haven. The game was played in 1875.

LOST ONLY ONE LONG GAME

Russell Ford Defeated in One Extra Inning Contest Since Starting in American League.

Russell Ford, who keeps a record of all the games he has pitched, dug up figures to controvert assertions that his delivery is such as to be weakening on his arm.

"I have lost only one extra-inning game since I've been in the American league," said Ford, "and that was my first one."

Ford then produced the following record of the extra-inning battles from the archives: 1910, lost in ten innings to Mullin of Detroit, score 4 to 3; won from Walsh of Chicago in 11 innings, score 3 to 2; 1911, won in 12 innings from Walsh, score 4 to 3; won in 13 innings from Walker of Washington, score 5 to 1; won from Kaler of Cleveland in ten innings, score 4 to 2.

VIN CAMPBELL IS TOO FAST

Ran Himself Off Pittsburgh Team by His Eagerness to Capture Files in the Field.

Vin Campbell, who was traded by the Pirates to Boston for Mike Donlin, literally ran himself off the Pittsburgh club. At least such is the opinion of Mordecai Brown.

Campbell has speed, lots of speed. In the outfield his speed was a menace, and at times he had Fred Clarke in fear of his life. Doubtful territory between two outfielders, one of them will stop, yell to the other and let him have it. Not so Campbell.

As a result Clarke was not sorry to get rid of the youngster for steady, experienced Mike Donlin. At bat Campbell's speed, according to Brown, was also a detriment. The moment he faced the pitcher he was, in his mind, starting for first. He never put his whole thought on hitting the ball, but was thinking of his start. As a result he never truly hit up to his possibilities, and for all he is younger than Donlin, was of far less use than the ex-Giant is expected to be.

STILL ONE-SIDED EFFECTS

The Season's Styles Show Trimming on One Side Only, Both in Dresses and Bodices.

The artistic, unbalanced decoration of a gown was given full recognition last year and is enjoying an emphatic favor for the spring and summer. When a view of the styles is taken, the one-sided trimming is very noticeable.

Bodices are draped on one side and plain on the other. They show materials that are distinctly different on the two sides of the blouse, and buttons, braid, lace frills, embroidered revers and platings are used on one side to balance trimming of an entirely different nature on the other.

In the sashes and girdles the one-sided effects receive decided favor. In the front and back these sashes, that are used on the majority of models, are knotted, tied or folded at one side.

Skirts are draped upon one side under a strip; rows of buttons, with simulated buttonholes, are found on a skirt. The one-sided, slashed effect on the bottom of the skirt is one of the features that many tailored suits are observing.

The idea is to depart from the symmetrical balanced trimming. A glimpse at accepted styles will prove the beauty of the one-sided decorations.

MR. AND MRS. A. P. MOORE.

Lillian Russell the Bride of a Pittsburgh Millionaire.

LILLIAN RUSSELL WEDS

Theatrical Star Married to Alexander Moore, Pittsburgh Millionaire.

Pittsburgh, Pa., June 13.—Lillian Russell, the much-married and perennial beauty, was married to Alexander P. Moore, publisher of the Pittsburgh Leader and millionaire.

The ceremony was performed in the parlors of the Hotel Schenley in the presence of the Weber and Fields company and a few personal friends of Mr. Moore. A wedding breakfast was served in a private dining room adjoining the parlor.

There were probably fifty guests present when the couple walked down the aisle formed by the guests to the preacher, who stood under a bower of flowers. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Lewis, of the Methodist Episcopal church.

Mrs. Moore started for the east and about the same time Mr. Moore started for the west, going to Chicago to attend the Republican national convention. Mr. Moore is one of the Roosevelt leaders in Pennsylvania.

Three husbands had been placed in the discard by "Fair Lillian" before she plighted her troth to Mr. Moore early this year. If she cared to use her full name she might call herself Helen Louise Leonard-Braham-Solomon-Chaterton-Russell.

VOTES FOR WOMEN TO BE A T. R. PLANK

Roosevelt Says It Will Be in Platform Draft.

Oyster Bay, N. Y., June 13.—Colonel Theodore Roosevelt announced through Judge Ben B. Lindsay, of Denver, Colo., that he is in favor of woman suffrage in this country and that the platform which he will submit to the Chicago convention will contain an unequivocal declaration to that effect.

"Colonel Roosevelt," Judge Lindsay said, "has come out decidedly for woman suffrage. He was induced to take this definite stand by what the women voters have done in Colorado in opposition to Messrs. Guggenheim and Evans; in Washington, California and other western states. Colonel Roosevelt told me that he was convinced from this record of the advantage to be gained by placing the ballot in the hands of the women. The colonel also said that he had definitely decided to incorporate in the platform which he will submit to the Chicago convention a woman's suffrage plank."

Colonel Roosevelt said that Judge Lindsay's statement was entirely correct.

STOCK EXCHANGE SAVED BY MORGAN

Money Probe Brings Forth Tale of 1907 Panic.

HOW IT WAS RELIEVED

Financier Loaned $25,000,000 When Call Money Was 100 Per Cent and Saved the Day.

New York, June 13.—The tale of how J. Pierpont Morgan came to the rescue of the New York stock exchange at the height of the 1907 panic by lending it $25,000,000 when "call money" was being quoted at 100 per cent, was told on the witness stand at the Pujo congressional committee's inquiry into the "money trust" by R. H. Thomas, who was president of the exchange at the time.

On Oct. 24, 1907, when banks were failing and money could not be obtained, the appalling discovery that there was no money was brought home to the members of the exchange with a baldness which caused consternation. Mr. Thomas said he rushed over to the National City bank to consult with James Stillman, who was president. Stillman advised him to go to see Morgan.

After Thomas left for Morgan's office, Stillman called up the latter on the telephone and advised him of the situation. There was much confusion and excitement at the Morgan office when Thomas arrived there. No room was had for the exchange president to reach the door of Mr. Morgan's private office than it opened and the financier appeared on the threshold. Without waiting for Thomas to speak, Mr. Morgan brusquely exclaimed:

"We are going to let you have $25,000,000. Go over to the exchange and tell them."

Thomas suggested that it might be well to split the money up in suits to be divided among different bank representatives so that there would be plenty of money in money quarters. Mr. Morgan thought that was a good idea and shouted out:

"Perkins, divide that up in lumps."

Then he retired to his office, slapping the door behind him. Thomas went back to the exchange and in less than five minutes J. P. Morgan & Co. had delivered $25,000,000 in cash and saved the day.

The first witness was James G. Cannon, president of the Fourth National bank. Mr. Cannon showed no hesitation in admitting that the entire country pays tribute to the stock exchange, which is the soul of Wall street.

"It is done," Mr. Cannon said, "by out-of-town banks carrying deposits in New York banks. These deposits are farmed out in loans on the exchange. In 1907 clearing house associations issued $250,000,000 worth of certificates, of which $100,000,000 worth were issued in this city."

Asked if his bank would lend money to the Consolidated stock exchange, he said it would not. He thought there were banks that would lend to the small exchange, but could give no names.

Mr. Untermyer brought out an admission from the witness that the banks in all parts of the country send their surplus funds to New York to be used in call loans, which made possible vast speculations.

Federals Defeat Rebels.

Santiago, Cuba, June 13.—A detachment of government troops under Major Rosendo Collazo fought a battle with the insurgents near El Cobre, ten miles to the west of Santiago.

The rebels were defeated, losing ten killed. The government troops made effective use of their artillery and are now pursuing the fleeing insurgents.

A force of rebels under the command of General Evaristo Estenoz has been seen in the vicinity of Sagua de Tanamo, in the northeast of the province of Oriente. General Ivonet is reported to be surrounded by the government troops at Las Cuevas, between Sagua de Tanamo and Zatorara.

The number of rebels who attacked Sagua de Tanamo on the night of June 8, when they were repulsed, is said to have been 500.

PRESIDENT TO VETO APPROPRIATION BILL

Won't Approve Elimination of Commerce Court.

Washington, June 13.—President Taft told friends that he would veto the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill if, when it comes to his signature, it abolishes the commerce court in effect by cutting off the court's appropriation.

Both the house and senate have eliminated provision for the commerce court measure.

President Taft said that he considered the court necessary to prompt and effective enforcement of the interstate commerce act. In speeches he has said that when its limitation were defined by the supreme court the new tribunal would be approved by the railroads and the people.

The supreme court gave several decisions greatly restricting the power of the commerce court and reversing its action in several important cases where it disagreed with the interstate commerce commission.

The president's friends say he will write a vigorous veto message.

DOCTORS OPERATE ON GRACE

Attempt to Remove Bullet From Spine of Man Shot in Atlanta.

Atlanta, Ga., June 13.—Eugene H. Grace, the former Philadelphian, who charges his wife, Mrs. Daisy Urie Grace, with attempting to murder him, underwent a serious and delicate operation in his home in New York.

Considerable secrecy surrounded the operation, which was performed by three surgeons. No information was made public concerning it, but it was understood that an attempt was being made to remove the bullet which had lodged in his spinal cord and caused complete paralysis.

Grace was shot on the morning of March 5 while asleep in bed at his home in Atlanta. He charged that his wife shot him and she is now in jail on a charge of assault with intent to murder, which will be changed to murder should Grace die.

WHY the PAIGE is a Better Car

WE HAVE told you repeatedly the Paige car is a better car than other medium-priced cars. We have told you wherein it is better—in its carefully tested motor, its ground cylinders, its multiple disc clutch insert, its unusually complete equipment and its beauty of design.

Now we want to tell you why it is better—why we can build it better—and do build it better—than other cars which sell for Paige prices, or thereabout. These are some of the reasons:

BECAUSE the Paige-Detroit Motor Car Company has ample capital to conduct its business and is not dependent on advance deposits from dealers with which to manufacture the cars afterward.

BECAUSE all of the seven Paige models are built on one chassis and with the same unit power plant, thus permitting concentration on one construction design and simplifying our manufacturing processes.

BECAUSE our output (3500 cars for 1912) is large enough to enable us to buy all materials at the lowest possible price. If we built four times as many cars we couldn't buy our materials at lower prices in the same quality.

BECAUSE we put every single dollar possible into materials and workmanship and don't try to save money "under the hood" in order to include extra accessories which may be good selling arguments, but do not make for durability, efficiency and after-service in the car itself.

BECAUSE the Paige official organization is made up of a great group of successful business men who are manufacturing and selling the Paige Car on a strictly mercantile basis—not just for this year or next year but for years to come; building and selling not a "get-rich-quick" car, but a car which shall endure.

These are a few of the fundamental, essential reasons why the Paige is a better car than others in its price field.

Study the car carefully. If you are not an expert on automobiles bring an expert with you when you investigate the Paige.

Craved Safety.

"Captain," said a wealthy passenger who was about to take his first trip across the ocean, "I understand this ship has got several water-tight compartments?"

"Yes, sir," was the reply.

"Captain," the passenger went on decidedly, "I want one of those compartments—I don't care what it costs!"—London Telegraph.

Britz of Headquarters

"And that's what he did; he made the drawings at first hand, and probably colored them in the same way. Then he took them over to Paris and farmed out the contract among several firms, taking care to split up the drawings so that no one manufacturer of paste jewels might know they were reproductions of the famous Maharane necklace. Logan traced all the drawings in gay Paree, and sent them to me. Here they are." He took several small sheets of cardboard from an inner pocket and spread them on his desk.

"There's something missing from the center," Manning commented when he had placed the slips together. "This is a picture of a necklace with a hole in the middle."

Britz smiled.

"Yes," he said, "that's where the Maharane diamond was. You see, Griswold was too foxy to have an imitation of that celebrated stone made anywhere in Europe. He knew there wasn't a man on the Continent identified in any way with the trade who wouldn't recognize a drawing of that diamond on sight. Though the diamond is not so well known to the public, it's as familiar to every jeweler in Europe as the Kohinoor, the Hope, or any other of those great sparklers."

"Where could he have gone, then, to have the big stone reproduced?" asked the Chief.

"Ask the doctor there. If he's half the detective I think he is, he knows as well as I do."

Fitch smiled nervously, then his face became grave as the realization of what all this meant to Elinor surged back on him.

"I fancy," he said to Manning, "Lieutenant Britz has concluded the false Maharane diamond was made by a harmless lunatic we traced to the asylum."

"Right you are, doc!" said Britz brusquely. "You guessed it the very first time. Little old Mr. Martin was the gentleman. He did that job of work for Mr. Griswold, and from all I've heard a fine job he made of it, too."

"Crazy, is he?" asked Manning.

"Mad as they make 'em," Britz replied. "But, as the doctor says, harmless. He couldn't have made so good an imitation had he not believed he was manufacturing a genuine stone. That's his delusion, you understand—thinks he's making diamonds."

"He Made Drawings at First Hand."

"Well," said the Chief after another pause. "How did Griswold turn the trick when it came to a showdown?"

A faint smile flickered an instant about Britz's lips, then disappeared.

"He never got a chance to turn the trick," the detective replied. "For more than a year now, he's been casting covetous eyes on the same paste stones he had manufactured."

By a tremendous effort Fitch succeeded in subduing his excitement, and looking his hands behind his head, he waited with what patience he could for the rest of the detective's story. Manning seemed to turn to ice.

"Griswold has been in bad financial straits for over two years," Britz continued. "He's been doing stunts with the books of the Iroquois Trust company. At my request, the directors have had experts on the books for a couple of weeks, and they've got as pretty a case against Mr. Griswold as ever you saw. He wanted that necklace in order to get enough money to square his accounts."

"Now comes the strangest part of the case," the detective smiled as he made ready to fire the verbal bomb. "The most surprised man in the world, on the night that Mrs. Missioner discovered her jewels were mere paste, was Curtis Griswold."

Britz watched the effect of his words on his hearers. They shifted nervously in their seats as if impatient of the detective's pause.

"When did the Hindoos steal the jewels and where did they find them?" asked Manning.

"About one hour, or a little more, before I made a try for them myself," said Britz. "They nabbed them in the apartment of Mrs. Millicent Delaroché, in the Hotel Renaissance."

"And who, if you don't mind taking me into your confidence, is Mrs. Millicent Delaroché?" the Chief inquired.

"Mrs. Millicent Delaroché," said the detective crisply, "thinks she is the future Mrs. Curtis Griswold. But as far as Mr. Griswold is concerned, she may remain Mrs. Delaroché for the rest of her natural life. In other words, Griswold promised to marry her, and then got very busy in an attempt to marry Mrs. Missioner. He doesn't know yet, of course, that it will be a very long time before he has a chance to marry anybody. Neither does Mrs. Delaroché know how she has been fooled by the clubman. When she does know—which I think will be some time today—I think you'll see some fun fly."

Fitch, to get the upper hand of his nervousness, tapped his eyeglasses with a medical-looking lead pencil and listened very closely to the detective's story. Manning, too, was absorbed in what Britz had to tell. Both of his hearers, therefore, were momentarily disappointed when Britz, instead of going ahead with his story, asked that Donnelly and Carson be pried apart long enough for one of them to arrest Griswold, and the other to bring Mrs. Delaroché to Headquarters.

"I don't want to make things too unpleasant for these bright young men," Britz said sarcastically; "but I do want to give myself the satisfaction of having them nab the two persons they should have arrested in less than a week after the theft of Mrs. Missioner's jewels was discovered."

Manning felt he had no choice save to comply. He wasn't exactly pleased by the insistence of his Lieutenant's request; but when Britz, at a nod from him, pressed a push button and an attendant appeared in the doorway, Chief Manning ordered the bluecoat to ask Donnelly and Carson to report to him in the Lieutenant's room at once.

"Right here," Britz proceeded, "is where an interesting side feature of the mystery comes in. Griswold would have probably been more alert if he had known that men ten times as drolt as he, and a hundred times more unscrupulous, had journeyed half around the world to get one of those very gems he was preparing to steal from the woman he hoped to marry. I don't know exactly what's at the bottom of the interest those Hindoos have in the great Maharane diamond; but I do know they're willing to go pretty close to the electric chair to get it. I understand it was not really brought from the wife of an Indian prince, as Mrs. Missioner told his wife it was. My best information is that it came from a Hindoo temple. You know those savages set great store by their idols. At any rate, from a half-dozen to a dozen Indians of various degrees came here from Calcutta some time ago and camped on the trail of the Maharane diamond. They played a waiting game and, apparently, they were on the point of making a grand effort to get the stone when the head of this organization happened to be in the box next to Mrs. Missioner at the Metropolitan Opera House on the night when the necklace turned out to be a fake. He then learned that the original diamonds were not in the widow's keeping any longer."

"Griswold also was in the Missioner box that night, as you know, and he must have noticed the Oriental who butted in during the search for the diamonds."

Britz paused a little, and then resumed:

"These Hindoos worked about as fast as I did. They must have made up their minds pretty early in the game that Miss Holcomb knew nothing about the necklace, and of course, nobody would be foolish enough to suspect little Miss March. Our dark friends from the East concentrated their attention on Griswold and Sands. For a long time, all had been in Mrs. Missioner's employ. He wasn't, however, Mrs. Missioner's employee in the true sense of the word. He was there as one of the subordinates of this Swami chap, along with the other Oriental fellows, one of whom calls himself Prince Kananda. In fact, all was on the job from the day he became a member of Mrs. Missioner's household. He was sent there for the precise purpose of picking off the place, and either getting the big diamond himself, or tipping the Swami and all the rest of them when it would be safe for them to make a try. It stands to reason Mrs. Missioner watched her jewels pretty closely, and that her safe was a jimmied since that necklace. In all those long months could not be lifted by the Hindoo servant. He would have been perfectly willing to throttle her in order to get it had he felt reasonably sure of a getaway as easily after a murder as after a robbery."

"You must have been reading about All Baba and the Forty Thieves," said Manning with another harsh laugh. "This sounds altogether too much like the Arabian Nights to be the goods."

"Well, there weren't as many as forty of the thieves, and the All in this case wasn't an honest man. I'm giving it to you straight, Chief. I haven't worked day and night on this proposition for nothing. You'll find it just as I'm telling it to you, and if you'll suspend judgment until I get through, I'll deliver the goods all right."

"I think," remarked Fitch to Manning, "we shall find that Lieutenant Britz comes pretty near knowing what he is talking about. I've seen him work on this case, and I know something of the facts he has discovered. If you have ever studied the ways of Orientals you'll be surprised at nothing they do. They look at life from altogether a different angle. Life is about the cheapest thing in life to them."

"Very good," said Manning. "I'm willing to be convinced, but it seems hard to believe that a woman worth a hundred millions could live for months with death hanging over her head in her own household, and yet know nothing about it. What's the use of being a multi-millionaire if you're no safer than in an eighteen-dollar flat? For my part, I don't take much stock in your Hindoos."

"You'll take a lot of stock in them before the morning is over, Chief, if you stay with us," Britz retorted. "I'm going to show you not only the Hindoos in the act of attempting to get away, but I'll turn up the goods in their possession. They have the diamond now, but I'll have both them and the diamond in a very few hours!"

"I believe you," Fitch chimed in. "You see, Chief," he explained to Manning, "this Lieutenant of yours has made the capture of the Hindoos more or less of a personal matter."

A choppy laugh from the detective interrupted the physician.

"Yes," he agreed, "I don't mind telling you that I'm almost as eager to get those fellows as I am to recover the widow's jewels. They got just a little bit too gay with me for their own good." He flushed slightly as he recalled how utterly he had been at the mercy of the Hindoos when he lay like a holiday turkey on the floor of that bare room in the unoccupied uptown apartment.

"The Hindoos," said Britz, "went through the apartments of Sands and Griswold with what Sam Weller would call a double-million-magnifying microscope. They didn't leave a postage stamp unsearched. They looked into every hole and corner, ransacked every drawer, and turned every place inside out. I caught 'em at it—two of them, anyway—in Sands' room, and they're now in the West Thirtieth Street Station. They must have gone through Griswold's apartment first, for it was there, I guess, they found this note from Millicent to 'Curtis dear,' and it was this note that gave me a line on how brother Griswold stood with the lady of the Hotel Renaissance. I knew Griswold was in the habit of visiting that hotel, but I didn't know whom he went there to see. I felt pretty certain when I got the note that it came from somebody in the Renaissance, and I got Rawson to send the bunch out on the hunt so that I could make certain I'd made no mistake."

"One of the men reported there was a Mme. Delaroché at the Renaissance. That looked good enough to me. I went there that same night, with the doctor on the sidewalk, as the lookout. I did a little burglary stunt that would have landed the jewels if the Hindoos had not got there ahead of me. In some way or other, those fellows learned about the acquaintance between Griswold and the Delaroché lady about the same time I did, or perhaps a little earlier. One of them got into her apartment by the fire escape route and sneaked the jewels from under her pillow. What's more, he contented himself with the diamonds themselves, and didn't even take the casket they were in. The jewel case was still under her pillow when I got there, and it wasn't until after the lady, under the impression the gems were in the case, gave herself away more or less, that I found the little box was empty. When I looked out on the fire escape, I saw the handkerchief of the dark-skinned crackman had dropped in his hurry. That sent us hot-footed to the Swami's house."

When Britz had sketched the history of the Missioner case, Manning and Fitch looked at him admiringly. Both his hearers were thoughtful for a minute or two. Then the Chief, though he realized Britz had solved the mystery, could not refrain from picking flaws.

"You have not explained fully," he said, "how Griswold contrived to smuggle the small diamond into Miss Holcomb's room."

"Nor how the old curiosity dealer had the visiting card of Brunton Sands," suggested the doctor hesitantly. He disliked to seem over-critical of a man who had done so much for Elinor.

"Neither have you worked out an explanation of the fact that it was a woman who gave the order to the three French firms for the manufacture of the false diamonds, and that she gave the name of Elinor Holcomb," Manning pursued. "You'll have to make that clear to Mott, I'm thinking."

"I don't quite understand why the Hindoos kidnaped you, Lieutenant," added Fitch tentatively.

Britz smiled.

"Mere details," Britz replied. "First, Griswold did not smuggle the diamond into Miss Holcomb's room. That little trick was pulled off by All. He was the only one who could have done it, and his reason for wanting to throw suspicion on the young woman is plain. He was in the house to get the necklace and he also wanted to make a sure getaway. Therefore, he figured, if the jewels should be missed before he was able to get them out of the house, it would help his chances of escape to have suspicion thrown on the secretary. The diamond that was found among her things did not belong to the collarette. But its size and luster matched any one of a dozen of the stones in that magnificent setting, so that all of us took it for granted it was Mrs. Missioner's property."

"Very good," parried the Chief. "How about the other points?"

"It needs no vivid imagination," said Britz, "to picture Curtis Griswold employing a young woman to take the drawings to the French manufacturers and telling her to introduce herself as Elinor Holcomb, or by any other name he desired."

Manning nodded reluctantly, Fitch approvingly.

"As for old Martin's possession of Sands' card," continued the Lieutenant, "I see no explanation about that except that Griswold handed it to him. There seems to be a streak of malicious mischief in our club friend. As a side exploit in pulling off a big crime, he would enjoy making trouble for another—especially for a man he had reason to fear as a rival, which was the case with Sands. It may be he even hoped to cast suspicion permanently on the millionaire, though that seems hardly possible. Even when Sands acted so mysteriously in regard to that letter he recovered from the Hindoo burglar, he did not make me suspect he had stolen the diamonds, the strongest suspicion I had was that he might be shielding the thief, and that didn't last long."

"And your own little adventure?" asked the chief of detectives with a trace of malice.

"Oh, that was only a precaution on their part. They took the chance I might have recovered the Maharane, I suppose. Maybe they expected to find in my possession something that would give them a clue to the whereabouts of the stone. Then, once they got me, they thought they might as well keep me out of the running until they got what they wanted. It was no part of their plan to let me find the jewels and turn them over to Mrs. Missioner."

"You had a close call there, Lieutenant," observed the physician.

"Close enough," said Britz calmly. "But it's all in the day's work."

As Britz finished there was a timid tap on the door. In response to Manning's curt "Come in!" Donnelly and Carson crossed the threshold, and did their best to stand at ease in front of the Lieutenant's desk.

"You sent, huh, for us, Chief?"

"Yes," said Manning. "Lieutenant Britz wants you to attend to a little matter for him."

"Yes, Donnelly," said Britz coolly; "if you have nothing better to do just now, suppose you run up to Curtis Griswold's apartment, and tell him the Chief wants to talk to him."

"Suppose he won't come," said Donnelly, who evidently did not yet suspect it was desired that the clubman be taken into custody.

"Bring him, then," said Britz. "You haven't forgotten how to show a gentleman down to Headquarters, have you?"

Donnelly winced under the Lieutenant's scorn, and Carson turned gray.

"And you, Mr. Carson," said Britz, renewing his instructions, "be good enough to take a trip to the Hotel Renaissance, and ask Mrs. Delaroché to come down to see us for a little while."

Carson, in the crisis, felt he could not be too precise.

"Suppose she declines?" he asked.

"Bring her!" said Britz.

Fitch laughed aloud at the consternation in the faces of the two detectives. It was manifest both Donnelly and Carson were so far from the facts in the mystery that not only had neither of them dreamed of making a prisoner of Griswold, that suave society man who had volunteered so much assistance to them in their efforts to weave a web of circumstantial evidence against Elinor Holcomb, but that they were absolutely ignorant of the existence of such a person as Millicent Delaroché. They shuffled their feet with increasing nervousness as they felt the eyes of their chief upon them. Donnelly shot a glance of ill-repressed hatred at the Lieutenant, at ease in his revolving chair, faced the crestfallen detectives with a satirical smile.

Once or twice Donnelly essayed to speak, but each time he caught the frozen expression on the faces of the Chief and Britz, and the words died in his throat. Nothing remained save for the two brilliant crime-busters to carry out the Lieutenant's orders. As they turned to go their discomfiture was augmented by the real detective's mock solicitude.

"You'll find it an easy job, boys. Just ask the two of them to come down here quietly, and if they don't want to come, make 'em. Show them your shields, you know, and all that sort of thing."

When they had gone, Britz indulged his amusement to the extent of a laugh; Fitch joined him, and Manning, after a brief attempt to keep his face straight, also laughed heartily.

(To Be Continued.)

How He Got It.

"How did you get that fine spring overcoat?"

"I had a sure tip on a horse race."

"I never knew one of those sure tips to pan out."

"Neither did I. So I didn't play it. Put the money into an overcoat instead."

IT COULD NOT HAPPEN.

A newspaper having offered a prize for the most impossible item of local news, the competition was won by a wildly imaginative genius, who sent in the following brief story:

"A cabman and a bus driver came into collision in the street with their vehicles so that their wheels were locked."

"My dear sir," said the cabman. "I'm very sorry for this accident. Will you kindly excuse me?"

"Pray do not mention it, my dear sir," replied the bus driver. "The fault was mine, rather than yours."

"And after getting clear of each other they bowed politely and proceeded about their business with a pleasant 'good day.'"

The Call.

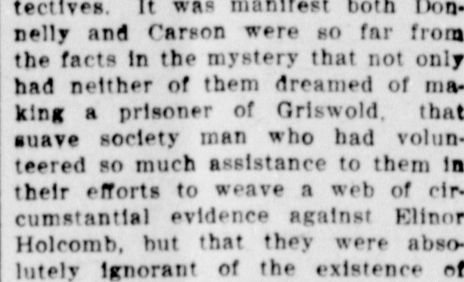

Wife—You know that Mrs. Newcomb moved in down the street Monday, so I called today.

Hub—Well, well! How like poker this "social game" is.

Wife—How do you mean?

Hub—Why, in poker you also call when you want to see what the other person has.

HIGHLY EDUCATED.

Lady—I would like to have that parrot, but I'm afraid it might swear.

Dealer—Well, if she does, it will be in French.

Going Slow.

"Some new potatoes today?" inquired the grocer with a sugary smile.

"I don't know," responded the young housewife. "The old kind have been quite satisfactory. How do these new potatoes differ from the old brands? If they are really an improvement, I might try some."

All Swelled Up.

"What is the matter with Jones? He used to be a modest sort of fellow, but lately he seems almost bursting with self-importance."

"Haven't you heard? Mrs. Jones is suing another woman for alienating his affections, and puts the damages at fifty thousand dollars."—Judge.

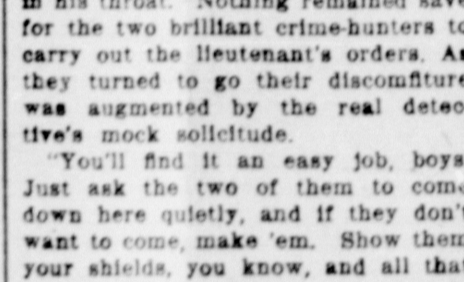

Thought Hubby Was Meant.

Society Dame—Oh, doctor, I'm so sorely troubled with ennui!

Doctor—H'm? Why don't you interest yourself in finding out how the other half lives?

Society Dame—Gracious! Why, I am not looking for a divorce!—Judge.

SIX MONTHS WITHOUT SLEEP.

Smith—Why don't you see a doctor about your insomnia?

Brown—I am afraid there is no hope for it.

Smith—Why not?

Brown—It's hereditary; my father was night editor of a Greenland paper.

Various Customs.

"In China a fine is imposed when a train is late. Queer custom, eh?"

"Oh, I don't know. Ever notice what happens when a boat comes in late in this country?"

"No; what happens?"

"She is promptly docked."

Its Proof.

"Are you so superstitious as to believe that there is bad luck in thirteen?"

"Can't help believing it. The thirteenth girl I asked to marry me did it."
